Key takeaway: As inflation and layoffs remains very top of mind, we see the gap between Beauty & Personal Care Dollar and Unit Sales narrows. For the first time in a year, unit sales are showing positive growth. Dollar sales continues to grow and outpace Unit Sales which experienced growth in Q1, 2023, despite less promotional activity and average unit prices continues to increase.

Key takeaway: Despite penetration being flat, Beauty & Personal Care continues to experience growth, with purchase size increasing, driven by strong In-Store performance. Overall, Purchase frequency continues to experience declines despite stong online growths, +6.5%. Online sales further develops as purchase size increases, despite buyer penetration remaining flat.

Similarly to the category, most Beauty & Personal Care categories consumption increased despite penetration remaining flat. Purchase Frequency declined across categories that may have less repeat purchasing behavior due to stock piling and inflation. Cosmetics & Nail and Fragrances continues to make notable gains, with significant growth in both purchase size and purchase frequency.
